School Improvement Leagues

They Are Formed by the Mothers in Many Towns.

IN a good many towns the mothers have banded themselves into a school improvement league. This is a very practical movement and for that reason finds endorsement in these columns.

When a child spends such a large percentage of its time in school it naturally is influenced by the surroundings of the class room. That is only natural.

We are beginning to realize these things and to modify the bare walls and the inartistic atmosphere. Green plants bloom in the windows, artistic prints ornament the walls, and there is an attempt to awaken the love of beauty in the child just as much as the love of arithmetic or geography.

When new schools are built the women of the place should make it a point to ascertain that they are of the required standard in every way.

But the finest building in the world will not be a factor toward producing intelligence, appreciation, etc., if it is not well ventilated, and it is much to be regretted that this important essential does not receive the attention it should.

Airing the class rooms once a day is not sufficient. The windows should be thrown open for a few minutes after every lesson. This is not a waste of time, as every teacher can testify who has tried it. The increase of intelligence among the pupils due to the fresh air is very marked indeed, and it makes a great difference in the attendance record.

Then there is the question of the school grounds. The women of the league see that these are kept supplied with trees and fresh soil. Whenever possible they encourage flower beds that the children themselves keep in order.

Last and not least, co-operation between the mothers and teachers is encouraged by means of monthly meetings.

If you are interested in the welfare of your children and have not a league of this sort in your town, why not start one?

Women, like princes, find few real friends.—Lord Lyttleton.

Teaching Children To Love Snakes

THAT is the modern educational idea. It is no longer right to be afraid of snakes and toads. Teachers in the public schools take their classes to zoos and museums and teach the children how to handle and feed them.

An Elevator Girl

SHE runs the elevator in a clubhouse for women which has just recently been started in Chicago. The club is a quiet residential one, and the members say the elevator girl is much more obliging and less noisy than a boy would be.

TARIFF FUTURE WE'RE HEADING FOR

CONGRESSMAN HILL POINTS OUT TARIFF PRINCIPLE.

Seeking Figures That Will Make Protection Represent Difference in Cost of Production at Home and Abroad.

Washington, D. C.—That the Payne tariff bill, now being put into effect throughout the country as the successor of the Dingley law, is far from being the kind of law that some of its framers would like to see in the statute books, is indicated by Representative E. J. Hill of Connecticut, a member of the Ways and Means Committee, in a statement made by him today. Mr. Hill indicates that the enactment of the Payne bill into law is but the beginning of a determined movement to bring about tariff legislation which shall adhere strictly to the principle that the policy of protection shall be the exact difference in the cost at home and abroad. He admits that in very few instances does the Payne law measure up to that principle.

"The general tariff law known as the Payne bill marks clearly and distinctly the establishment of a principle that the measure of protection in the future shall be the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad," said Mr. Hill today. "While the principle is not rigidly applied in the bill and could not be in the circumstances, the tendency is in that direction. The probabilities are that very few of the paragraphs have been brought, either up or down, to that precise point. The trouble has been in obtaining precise information to bring about that result. It has been done in a few cases and the principle has been established and while in no case have the rates been reduced below the point of protection, all the circumstances of the industry being considered. In a very large number of instances marked progress has been made and for this the country has to thank the leadership of the President and the arduous, constant and unremitting toil for more than a year of Seneca E. Payne, in the face of obstacles and opposition which would have deterred almost any other man in Congress.

"But there is another significant feature of the work of this session which it will take some time for the country to understand and fully appreciate its benefits, and that is the fact that in a single day and within three minutes' time the signature of the President was attached to two tariff acts, under the operation of which 100,000,000 people will be brought into practically free and unrestricted trade with each other, and that from Puerto Rico to the Philippines—more than half way around the world—American trade and commerce can go unrestricted and unweaved within and protected by the provisions of the general tariff law of the United States. It is doubtful whether in all the wars which England has fought in the last century there has been one which in its basic motive was not the extension of English trade. Her colonies have all been acquired for that purpose, and yet she finds herself today hampered in her relations with most of them by tariffs against the mother country. Ever since her Peace Jubilee the effort of Chamberlain and others of her statesmen has been to organize a Greater Britain, with unrestricted trade relations between the mother country and the colonies, and thus far it has been a failure.

"In a single day the United States has accomplished by peaceful means what Britain has been endeavoring to do for many years and failed, for all of the United States possessions and territories, except the little islands of Guam and Tutuila, are in practical free trade relations with each other. With the prosperity which this relation is certain to bring to the Philippine Islands the consumption of American products by the 7,500,000 people there is sure to grow with leaps and bounds, and with an average preferential of about eighteen per cent in favor of the United States, as against the rest of the world, we ought to enter at once upon the control of that trade and develop possibilities there as rapidly as we have already done in Puerto Rico.

"President Taft may well be pleased at the accomplishment of what he says he had been working ten years to obtain and the American people within the next ten years will realize more than they can possibly do now how much he has done for our industries in securing it."
